

One day American 18-year-olds will have the vote. Their influence is already strongly apparent in the nation's affairs. Politicians yearn for their interest and support to lend that youthful image to their campaigns. Meanwhile, at this and at an even younger age, politics still provides a field for self-expression of striking maturity, as well as youthful freshness.

The portraits on this page show a dispassionate view of the pre-convention presidential candidates that the voter, who has to make his commitment and a responsible choice, cannot afford. Perhaps an observant teen-age student sees something the adult loses sight of when he has to abandon his detachment.

These portraits are some of the best of 200 entries in the Young People's Art Course Special Election Project. The entrants, from all over the country and aged between 12 and 18 years, are students of a home study art school run by Famous Artists Inc., of Westport, Conn. Possible political candidates were the subject of the contest and any medium except pastel could be used. Each student was assigned a candidate rather than given his choice, to insure a variety of entries. The eventual winner will be rewarded with an expense-paid trip to visit the Famous Schools and the studios of well-known artists on the faculty.

CANDIDARTS

Ronald Reagan—
Water color portrait
"Creepy and eerie" illustrations fascinate 17-year-old BRIAN CLIFTON, of Fort Lauderdale, Florida. He looks forward to a career as an artist. He spends his spare time collecting material by studying horror movies and comics, and reading science fiction to illustrate.

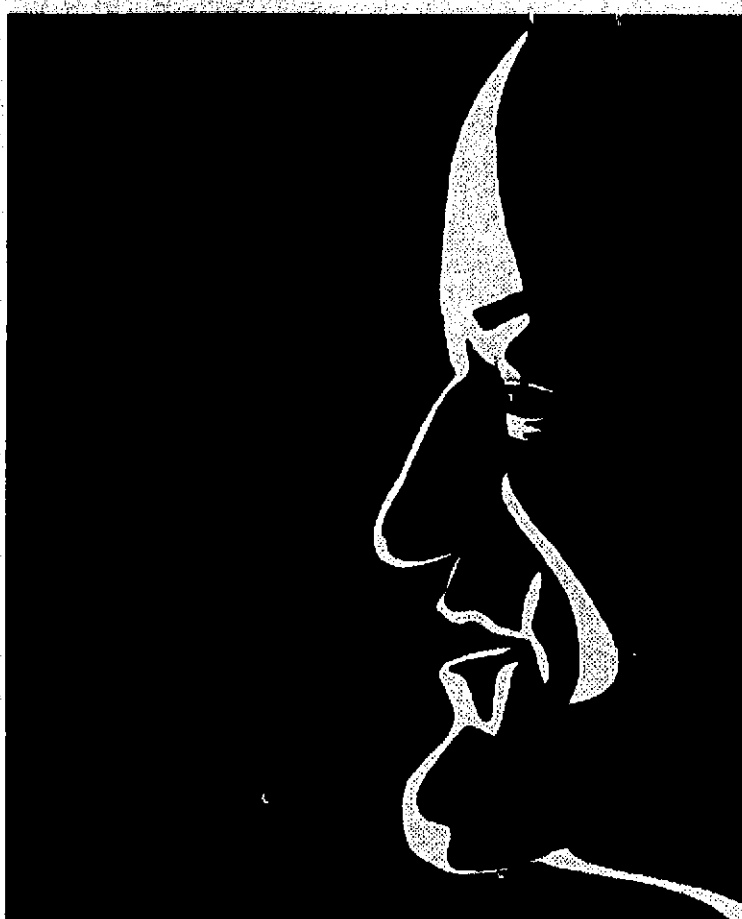

Brian Clifton

pencil drawing
WALF MULLINS, 18 years old, of Yuba City, California, studies art at school and belongs to the art club there. The subject matter which interests him most is people, and he particularly enjoys doing magazine covers, advertising illustrations and portraits.

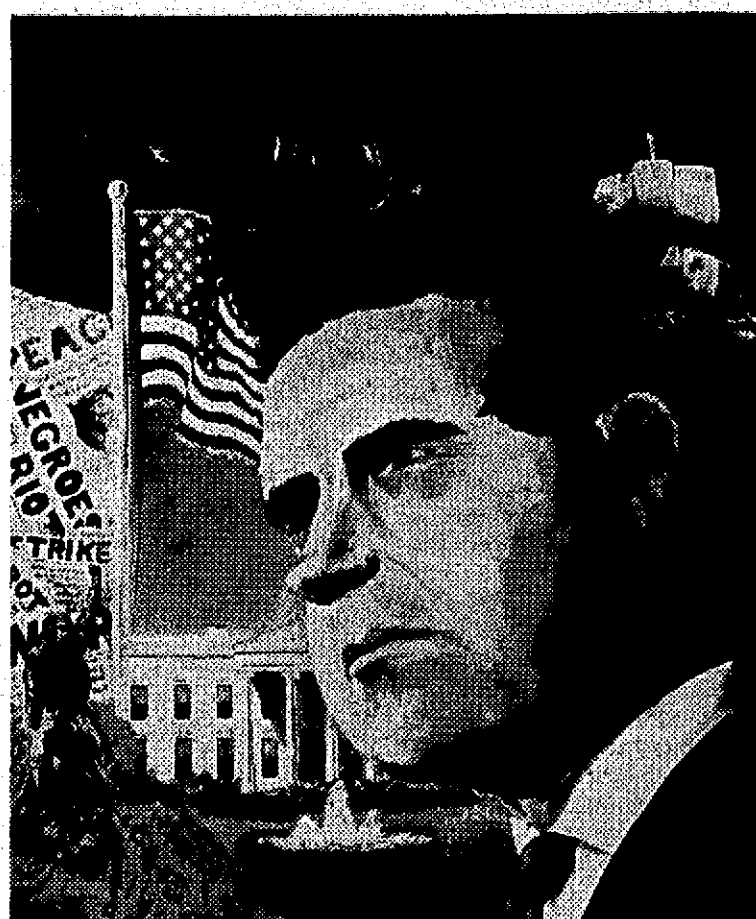

Walf Mullins

Hubert Humphrey—
Day Glo color poster
"Making posters for other people keeps me busy," says STEVE HANSON, aged 15, of Sioux Falls, South Dakota. It is also what he likes doing, and he hopes to make it his profession eventually. He still finds time, however, to attend the local Civic Fine Arts Center where he has held scholarships for the past four years.

Steve Hanson

Richard Nixon—Oil
As well as in art classes at school, CARL ARNOLDI, 17-years old, of West Hartford, Connecticut, studies oil painting at the West Hartford Art League. He has a special interest in drawing World War II scenes and action pictures. Carl is going to the University of Connecticut to study for a degree in mechanical engineering.

Carl Arnoldi

George Wallace—
Pencil on paper
TOM WISWELL, 17 year-old of Laurel, Maryland, would like to be both a good artist and a writer. It is only about two years since he became interested in drawing, but he would like to combine these two talents to produce an adventure comic strip. He not only enjoys drawing people; he loves animals and often makes them his subject matter.

Tom Wiswell

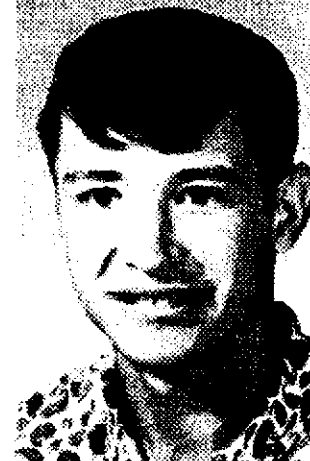

Nelson Rockefeller—
Oil on paper
RANDY BATES, aged 17, of Rialto, California, has wanted to draw as long as he can remember. Several members of his family are artists. His ambition is to become a successful commercial artist. At present, capturing the human element in his art interests him most.

Randy Bates

Eugene McCarthy—
Oil on canvas board
At the age of 16, TOM DOSSETT of Mackinaw, Michigan, has a wide range of interests in the arts and music. He hasn't yet decided what to aim for in life. He studies art at school and at the YWCA. He also devotes as much of his spare time as possible to art; he particularly enjoys portraits, human figures and still life.

Tom Dossett

Nelson Rockefeller—
Cartoon
MONICA LOHNER, aged 18, of Schenectady, New York, wants to be a teacher—possibly of art. Meanwhile she herself studies and belongs to the school art club. With the club she visits city art galleries and goes on sketching excursions. Her special interest is still life drawing.

Local Option Squabble at Mena

MENA, Ark. (AP) — Polk County Judge J. B. "Bus" Stevenson said today that the county court has no jurisdiction to determine the sufficiency of local option liquor election petitions.

Notice had been given previously that a hearing would be held at 10 a.m. today to determine whether the petitions, which were filed with the county clerk Sept. 5, contained enough valid signatures of voters.

The petitioners hoped to place the issue on the ballot in the Nov. 5 general election. The county currently is dry.

Stevenson said that Prosecutor Joe Hardegreve previously had advised him that the hearing was necessary. Hardegreve's deputy, Garnet Norwood of De Queen, filed a contest of the petition in the county court Wednesday, listing some 24 Polk County citizens as contestants. They oppose legalization of liquor sales.

The judge said he believed he should have the legal opinion of an attorney not connected with the matter in any way. He requested a written opinion of the law from Bob Shaw, an attorney from Mena.

He asked Shaw to explain the role of the county court in such cases.

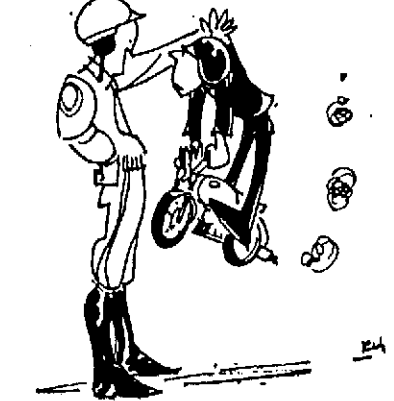

Shaw delivered his opinion Thursday and cited a constitutional requirement that places the matter of sufficiency of petitions in the jurisdiction of the county clerk for decisions subject to review by the Chancery Court.

The opinion pointed out that a 1965 amendment to the 1942 local option law made this

THE NATIONAL REPORT ON WHAT'S HAPPENING

MINI-MIX UP: Mini-bikes are mixing up the serenity of highways and byways. Illegal on the public highways in most states, they are a noise-terror to suburban and rural homeowners along once-peaceful lanes. The "old folks" are raising vroom with police on enforcement of noise, speed and licensing regs. Police now faced with a "power grab." Mini-bike manufacturers are bringing out superhot models small enough to fit in a car trunk, but speedy enough to substantially add to the accident rate . . . growth of motorcycles. Speeded up world . . . not all the Now Generation either!

STUDENTS VS. DRUG ABUSE: Iowa pharmacists-to-be being programmed as integral part of a state-wide "recognition" campaign. The idea is to have pharmacists and their trainees work with local law enforcement officers on identification of drugs and symptoms of people taking them. Part of the plan is to have the pharmacy-trainees talk to student groups about the medical (and legal) problems related to use (abuse!).

JIM BROWN LOSING BROWNIE POINTS? Former Cleveland Brown Jim Brown is forming his own music company. The reason: "Because so many young artists were victimized by shady managers." Jim's acting ability is a few yards (rushing) removed from his football ability. The muscle he can provide to "victims of shady managers" may be a test of his business acumen. Mean while, the West Hollywood sheriff's office is pursuing their case against Brown and his ideas of law enforcement procedures. A roughed-up officer wants on with it.

FOREIGN "FRIENDS": Two-thirds of all foreign engineering students receiving Ph.D.s remain in the United States. There just doesn't seem to be an answer to the problem of educating foreign students for the advancement of their own nations. Peace Corps please note!

GOLDEN GIRL OF THE SILVER BLADES: Prima ballerina of the ice, Peggy Fleming, will soon be touring the United States as featured superskater with Shiptad and Johnson Ice Follies. Americans who shared Peggy's golden hour during the Winter Olympics can look forward to seeing Peggy in person as she recreates the grace and skill that won her the only U.S. gold medal this year. At 19, Peggy knows all about the gold drain . . . in reverse. Her gold medal will prove to be worth about $1 million in contracts, personal appearances, etc.

HERE'S AN ITEM in ready-to-wear hair which enables a woman to add a flip to any hairdo. It comes in two shades—silver blond for brunettes and redheads, honey blond for blonds. Formed from hair strands 22 inches long, the streaks themselves measure 11 inches in length. The mini-comb is featherweight and can be stretched to slide into and grip the wearer's hair effortlessly. At top; it is used as tendrils for an evening "do." Streaks for any occasion are shown (bottom).

DROPPED BUY LOSES BOUNCE

Dear Helen: I was going with this girl for over two years. She finally couldn't stand the way I treated her so she broke up. For instance, if I took her out, I used her money, then kept what was left. I made three times as much as she did, but I never spent any of my money on her. I stood her up three of four times a week so I could bowl or play pool — with her money on a few occasions.

I told her many times I loved her but I thought then it was a lie. Now that she's gone, I realize it wasn't.

I cry myself to sleep every night, and I'm 19, so I don't cry for nothing. How can I get her back? — RICH

Dear Rich: Don't try. You'd never be on even keel with this girl. If she took you back, you'd either drift into selfishness again, or else she'd crack the whip to get even — which would serve you right, but make you both miserable. — H

Dear Helen: Why is it that a boy thinks girls have to have money spent on them? I am 18, and my favorite kind of date is a nice long walk. This way I can get to know the boy better, because we can talk.

Don't get me wrong, I like fun things too, but I feel bad when a boy spends his hard-earned money on me. Am I crazy or something, and do boys appreciate the quite kind of girl who thinks just talking to a boy she likes is better than watching a movie? — QUIET GIRL

Dear Quiet: Your attitude should fetch male cheers, but it can be overdone. Spending money on a girl fires a boy's ego; it's his way of proving he likes her. Help him save where you can, but don't always discourage those "fun things." He may: 1. Think you're getting too serious; 2. Get change in procedure. Stevenson said that the other attorneys had apparently overlooked this change in the law and, acting upon their advice, he had set the hearing and caused public notice to be given.

The matter then was shifted to the county clerk, Mrs. Helen Thomas, who began a check of the signatures to determine if they are valid.

About 1,000 valid signatures are necessary to put the issue on the ballot. The petitions bear 1,566 names.

selfish and take you for granted, or 3. Find a girl who lets him feel like a "big spender" once in a while. — H

Dear Helen: The other day my dad said that I don't confide in him. I asked him what he meant and he said I didn't tell him what some of his partner's daughters tell him, but he didn't say what. I don't really know what he's talking about. I'm only 14 and nothing exciting has ever happened to me. What should I tell him? — TROUBLED

Dear Troubled: You'd better not tell him this, but I will: If a man must ASK for his 14-year-old daughter's confidences, he's been a pretty lousy listener up to now. And if he wants them only so that he can impress his partners with "how much my daughter tells me" — and what, he'll stay in the dark . . . I hope! — H

Dear Helen: I fought in Vietnam. I have a wife and a baby, a good job, and a credit card. But my wife and I can't go into a bar and get a drink, because we're under 21. Silly, isn't it? — RON

Dear Ron: Certainly isn't — H

$115,798 Grant to Huntsville

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — A $115,798 grant to be used in the construction of community service centers at Huntsville and Kingston (Madison County) has been approved by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Sen. J.W. Fulbright, D-Ark., made the announcement Thursday. He also said a $64,000 insured loan and a $61,000 grant to a group of 135 farm families in Miller County had been approved by the Farmers Home Administration. The funds are to be used to develop a rural water system.

Rooney Having Allmomy Trouble

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge issued a warrant for the arrest of Mickey Rooney after the actor failed to appear at a hearing about back allmomy to his sixth wife.

Superior Court Judge William E. MacFadden issued the warrant Wednesday and set bail at $625. He postponed the hearing until Oct. 16.

Rooney's former wife, Margaret, 46, says he owes her $1,072 in back allmomy and $7,500 in attorney's fees.

The couple was married in Las Vegas on Sept. 10, 1966, and separated 100 days later. The property settlement required Rooney to pay $350 a month allmomy for a year.

Rooney, 47, was not available for comment.

Television and Radio

NEW YORK (AP) — "From Chekhov, With Love," the 90-minute CBS drama special Wednesday night rolled along somberly and interminably. Even if one was not utterly caught up with the correspondence and problems of the turn-of-the-century Russian playwright, the program was an interesting experiment in television technique.

Jonathan Miller, British actor-director, adapted the production to television from a Russian play which in turn was fashioned from the letters of Chekhov, his brother, sister, actress wife and best friend, revolutionary playwright Maxim Gorky.

It came to television less a drama than a stylized reading. Sir John Gielgud, as the trail doctor who abandoned medicine to write plays including "The Sea Gull" and "The Cherry Orchard" presented a portrait of a man who in spite of his tuberculosis had a passion to keep writing.

He was surrounded by such excellent British performers as Nigel Davenport, Wendy Hiller, Peggy Ashcroft and Dorothy Tutin.

The program was shot almost completely in closeups. Often Gielgud talked from a position behind a desk or stretched out on a bed. Sometimes there were deliberately stylized backgrounds such as paper cut-outs of the principals who were being talked about.

While the project must have been of vast interest to students of the drama, it probably left the average television viewer cold. Chekhov, let us face it, is not exactly a household word in America, and even if one enjoys his writings, not everybody cares too deeply about his health or other personal problems.

What do television stars do when their series are canceled and they are out of work? They take on guest roles, even when they don't get billing.

And that has been the humiliating fate of a series star of two seasons back, Flipper, the lovable dolphin, will be back in a minor role in the season's premiere of "Gentle Ben," on CBS Sept. 29.

Moon's Distance
The moon's distance from the earth varies because its orbit is elliptical. Maximum distance is 252,710 miles; minimum is 221,463 miles.

At one table, the Twin City pair reached seven spades. The Montreal West was too smart to double. Had he done so, chances are his opponents would run out to seven no-trump, which makes easily because the club finesse will work.
At the other table, Montreal reached seven diamonds on the bidding shown in the box. South's five no-trump bid was the grand slam force. Ely Culbertson invented this bid back in the '30s but it was too sophisticated for those early days. It disappeared into limbo for almost 30 years but has been brought back by today's experts.
In this particular spot it said, "Partner, bid seven if you hold two of the three top honors in trumps." North did and obliged.
East's double of seven diamonds was another old-time gadget. The Lightner slam double called for an unusual lead against an adverse slam. If either North or South had run to seven no-trump, East would have been sorry for his double. He was sorry anyway when his partner led a heart. South ruffed in his hand, ran off all his trumps, cashed his ace, king and queen of spades, entered dummy with the king of clubs, discarded his last two spades on the ace and king of hearts and led the five of clubs. East had been forced to unguard his queen of clubs in order to keep a high heart, and Montreal picked up 21 International Match Points on this one hand.

West's decision to lead a heart was unfortunate and we feel that he should have led the spade and given his partner a ruff. He was looking at six spades and might well have visualized his partner with none at all.

Moon's Distance
The moon's distance from the earth varies because its orbit is elliptical. Maximum distance is 252,710 miles; minimum is 221,463 miles.

At one table, the Twin City pair reached seven spades. The Montreal West was too smart to double. Had he done so, chances are his opponents would run out to seven no-trump, which makes easily because the club finesse will work.
At the other table, Montreal reached seven diamonds on the bidding shown in the box. South's five no-trump bid was the grand slam force. Ely Culbertson invented this bid back in the '30s but it was too sophisticated for those early days. It disappeared into limbo for almost 30 years but has been brought back by today's experts.

SHORT RIBS

Political Candidates

The Star is authorized to announce that the following are candidates for public office subject to action of the General Election in November.
For Representative
JAMES E. PRUDEN JR.

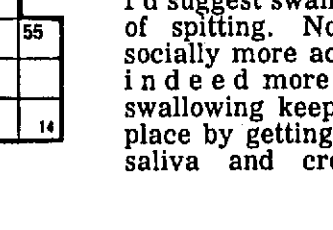

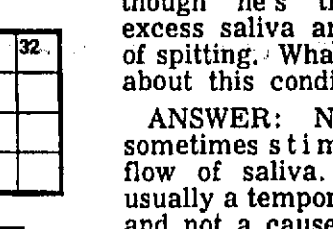

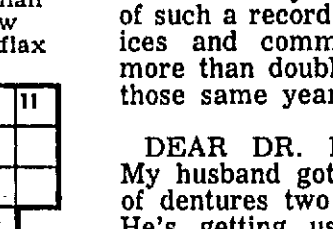

YOUR DENTAL HEALTH

DEAR DR. LAWRENCE: I have an extra set of dentures and I'd like to know how to keep them when they're not in use. Can they just be wrapped in tissue paper? Or must they be kept moist?
ANSWER: Plastic dentures should be kept moist at all times. If not, they have a tendency to warp. It may not be noticeable to the naked eye, but you'll notice it quickly enough when you put them back in your mouth.
A good way to store dentures is in a sealed plastic bag in which there are two or three cotton balls saturated with aqueous Zephiran. Zephiran is an antiseptic and germicide.
Before storing teeth, scrub them clean with hand brush, soap and warm (not hot) water.

DEAR DR. LAWRENCE: Could you tell me why it costs so much to have teeth straightened? It's costing us hundreds of dollars to have our daughter's teeth straightened.
ANSWER: It may come as a surprise to you, but the cost of orthodontic treatment now is no more than it was 10 years ago. And, in fact, many types of treatment cost much less. This is because techniques have improved and time of treatment shortened. I can't think of any service or commodity able to boast of such a record. Many services and commodities have more than doubled in cost in those same years.

DEAR DR. LAWRENCE: My husband got his first set of dentures two months ago. He's getting used to them, though he's troubled with excess saliva and does a lot of spitting. What can be done about this condition?
ANSWER: New dentures sometimes stimulate extra flow of saliva. But this is usually a temporary nuisance, and not a cause for concern. I'd suggest swallowing instead of spitting. Not only is it socially more acceptable, and in deed more sanitary, but swallowing keeps dentures in place by getting rid of excess saliva and creating better

Bobcats and Prescott in Scoreless Tie

By RALPH ROUNTON
Star Sports Writer

The time for the Hope Bobcats must be coming soon. It's been as close as the next breath for two weeks now. Last night was a real headshaker, with an ultra-tough Hope defense and a stymied offense settling for a 0-0 tie with the Prescott Curley Wolves before another overflow crowd at Cummins Field in Prescott.

For the second straight game, the Bobcats had it all over the opponent in the statistics, but those bad breaks stayed on to haunt the Cats on a Friday the 13th. Hope only lost one fumble, but it had to come on the Prescott 2-yard line. That's right, the 2-yard line. So the Bobcats came out of it with nothing gained or lost and an 0-1 record to show for it. But as for the game itself, the Curley Wolves self-admittedly were quite lucky to get out of it with a scoreless tie. In fact, they were blessed.

Prescott never got farther than the Bobcat 46-yard line on offense, and their defense constantly had its backs to the wall. On the other hand, the Bobcats never had to operate within their own 20-yard line, and that was on the first series of the game.

Hope took the opening kickoff and marched to a pair of first downs before a holding penalty stopped the drive. That possession was time-consuming, though, and when Prescott got the ball five minutes of play had already elapsed. On third down the Wolves fumbled, and Jerry McWilliams jumped on it at the Prescott 33 to give Hope a break.

A thirteen-yard sweep by McWilliams gave the Cats first and goal at the three, but on second down FB Jim Alford couldn't get his hands onto the ball and a happy Curley Wolf curled over it. Prescott was unable to move, however, and had to punt from their own seven.

After the boot carried to the 35, Rodney Jones took for the sidelines and dashed to the Prescott 11 as the first quarter ended 0-0.

This proved to be Hope's last great scoring opportunity, as the Bobcats worked into a 4th and four situation only five yards away from paydirt. Massanelli rolled out, but was smothered for a loss to end the threat there.

The remainder of the half found the Curley Wolves unable to reach their own 45-yard stripe, but the Bobcats just couldn't get a solid attack rolling. However, Hope had sprung the surprise of sophomore Cary Wheelington, who as a reserve tailback showed his shiftness by picking up 41 yards.

I could tell you now about the sputtering offensives the Bobcats put up for the rest of the game, and the unoffensives which never got Prescott off the ground, period. I could tell you about the slipping down of a Bobcat runner just before he broke open, and I could tell you about the pass with TD written all over it that was just half a fraction too tall. But they don't matter now.

Those things can wait for Monday's article, as we're limited for space here. One good development of the second half came late in the game when Hope went to a passing attack, and in one stretch QB Larry Massanelli connected on 4 of 5 series.

There was a good following of local fans, and they all saw a spirited performance from the Bobcat defensive unit, which actually improved on last week's performance which had already been termed as better than at any time last year.

Once again the pursuit was outstanding, and the form tackling improved for the Cats over the week. We also controlled the ball very well, running 63 plays to Prescott's 43. But we just couldn't push that score across, making it now two games without a score for the Bobcats.

Fullback Alford led the rushers with 56 yards on only 11 attempts, but he was followed closely by Wheelington's 41 on ten tries and McWilliams' 45 yards on 18 trips. Larry Massanelli was credited with 16 yards on three carries, and Rodney Jones went 2 for 2 yards. Rodney was also the leading receiver with three catches amounting to 27 yards. Prescott quarterback Bill Greer led the Wolves with 33 yards on ten tries.

Although they were impressive on film, the rest of the Prescott backfield was highly unsuccessful.

White has spent the last 20 years as a top athletic trainer, healing physical aches and pains. He is also a magician and is an expert at relieving coaches' and athletes' tensions with some of his tricky feats.

White is one of eight trainers selected to accompany the United States Olympic team to Mexico City in October. He will be assigned to either the track or swimming squad.

White is one of those guys you seldom forget after meeting. He's carried a loose thread on his left lapel for years. To a person meeting the trainer for the first time, the natural inclination is to pull the thread off. That doesn't work, because the thread stretches out for over a foot. White will then hand the well-meaning person a pair of scissors that won't cut. With the subject thoroughly perplexed, he then whips out his card that reads: "White or Black, White's Magic Is Best."

White has any number of acts in his repertoire and a couple thousand dollars worth of equipment. He makes about 50 appearances a year at banquets and parties. White's magic is the best tonic he can prescribe some days for athletes at Wayne State and it's sure to be that way at the Olympic Games, where tension is at its greatest for most athletes.

He is also recognized, of course, as a topnotcher in his field of training. A good classroom instructor (he holds the rank of assistant professor), White teaches courses in athletic training, first aid and hygiene, with context divided between theory and actual practical experience.

White says he'll be as serious as any of the athletes at Mexico City but he'll also be prepared to lighten their lives as well as their physical problems. He performs both equally well.

Just like magic.

They 'Can't Find' Middle of Plate

NEW YORK — (NEA) — The best judges of a pitcher's effectiveness, to belabor the obvious, are opposing batters.

Of Denny McLain, California Angel shortstop Jim Fregosi says, "He's out there absolutely determined and cocksure that you aren't going to hit him. And he's usually right."

Of Bob Gibson, Willie Mays says, "I don't exactly fear facing him. But it is uncomfortable." Tommy Davis, formerly with the Dodgers and Mets and now with the White Sox, has called Gibson's fast ball "the radio pitch—you hear it, but you don't see it."

McLain and Gibson have had outstanding seasons in the past, but 1968 has been the most successful for each. Both say improved control is the primary reason.

"Gibson," said Cardinal catcher Tim McCarver, "doesn't know where the middle of the plate is." McLain's catcher, Bill Freehan, has a similar analysis for the Tiger ace: "The hitters want it down the heart of the plate. And that's where Denny never puts it."

It has not always been so. In earlier years, each had problems with control. Neither could ever be compared to, say, Rex Barney or some other wild pitchers. But they could not consistently put the ball where they wanted to.

"McLain," recalls Roger Maris, "used to throw a lot of pitches."

Gibson, despite 20 wins in 1965, led the National League in home runs allowed, 34. McLain, pitching in what Tiger pitching coach Johnny Sain calls a "homerun park," led the American League in home runs allowed in 1966 with 42 and last year with 35. For both, those figures now have been cut drastically. (It should be noted, however, that both pitchers' ratios of strikeouts to bases on balls have always been respectable.)

Mays believes Gibson is "not as mean as he used to be. He'd knock you down without a qualm. He doesn't do it any more. He's so confident, he simply challenges you, pitching to your strength and daring you to hit it."

"I've never been mean," retorts Gibson. "Willie doesn't understand. He mistook my lack of control for meanness."

Gibson has admitted brushing batters back, as all pitchers do, but he has also admitted to retaliating intentionally when a Cardinal is, in his opinion, hit on purpose. "If the other pitcher," said Gibson, "hits a man after one of our players has hit a home run, then I hit him."

Fregosi has noted a change in McLain, too. "He used to throw slop curves," said the Angel shortstop, describing an arc with his arm. "Now all his breaking stuff is hard. He's also a better competitor this year. Before it seemed that he felt, 'I'm trying to win. But if I lose, so what?' This year, you feel there's only one thing on his mind—win."

The competitive spirit has never been in question when Bob Gibson is mentioned. One of the most remarkable displays of this quality was exhibited by him in the ninth inning of the fifth game of the 1964 World Series. The Cards led 2-0, with a man on. Joe Pepitone hit a line drive that struck Gibson in the right buttock as he completed his twisting follow through. The ball bounded halfway toward third. Gibson, who falls toward first base after throwing, reversed himself, hobbled toward third, and in a single motion snatched the ball and threw Pepitone out.

Gibson is recognized as an overpowering pitcher; he has two fast balls. One is a sailer or "out" pitch with which he gets most of his strikeouts. And he gets plenty of them. He set a World Series record, for instance, in 1964 with 31 strikeouts in three games. The other fast ball is a sinker, used in double-play situations. He also throws a fine curve and an excellent slider. A change-up is employed infrequently.

Like Gibson, McLain has a pair of fastballs. But he is not, said coach Sain, "power, power, power." His fastballs, however, are his strikeout pitches. "Denny has a strong assortment," added Sain, "curve, slider and change-up."

This season Bill Freehan recalled a tense moment in the late innings when McLain was pitching against Boston, with a 2-0 lead. The Red Sox had no outs and runners on, with Dalton Jones, Carl Yastrzemski and Ken Harrelson coming up. Jones went out easily. Yastrzemski worked the count to 3-2, then began fouling pitch after pitch.

Displeased, McLain called to Yaz: "Hey slugger, can't you hit one between the white lines?"

"And I was afraid Yaz would," said Freehan. Eventually, Yaz went out. So did Harrelson. No runs scored. McLain had won another.

There are differences in personality, background, pitching styles, between these two supreme pitchers, McLain and Gibson, but in the end there is that one basic similarity: they win.

Victory Over Cancer

LOS ANGELES, Calif. — (NEA) — Jack Pardee is at the football age when most guys prefer to forget about their next birthday. His 11th season in the National Football League is coming up, and on April 19 of next year he will be 33 years old.

No one anticipated a birthday with more optimism. Jack Pardee will be thankful to be around to celebrate. And part of that ritual will be a visit to the doctor's office in Bryan, Texas, where he lives between seasons. Because on April 19, 1969, Jack expects to become one of the five million people in this country officially cured of cancer.

It was exactly five years earlier, to the day, at the UCLA hospital in Los Angeles that surgery on his upper right arm removed an unsightly mole the size of a dime. Every six months since then, he has been returning to the doctor's office to make sure that the black growth hasn't returned.

"There is no cure," he says frankly, "until five years have gone by. The doctors diagnosed it as malignant melanoma. Jim Umbricht had the same thing."

The late Jim Umbricht was a pitcher with the Houston Astros of the National League. Pardee didn't know him. But one day in the spring of 1964 Phyllis Pardee was reading in the newspapers that Umbricht had died of cancer, which had spread from a mole on his leg.

And she kept thinking about this spot on Jack's arm that had grown more pronounced over the winter and kept peeling off in the spring. Phyllis insisted that Jack go to the UCLA hospital for examination (they were living in Los Angeles that off-season). The doctors immediately discovered the melanoma and removed it on his birthday.

"I was very fortunate," says Jack. "They caught it when it was still in a state of isolated profusion."

Jack has in the years since then become interested in the symptoms and treatment of cancer. In Texas, he donates his time to the American Cancer Society at the state level on fund-raising projects.

"Being aware of warning signals is what I stress," he explains. "Doctors can cure half the people if they can catch them in time. But everybody is scared to go in for checkups."

Because of the Pardee case, a secretary in the Rams' front office, Trudy Replogle, was successfully treated for a similar growth. And so was a former Southern California football star, Jack Banta, who had played three seasons with the Rams.

The season before his operation, Pardee had gained all-pro acclaim as the strong side linebacker for the Rams. The fall after it, the surgery still preying subtly on his mind, he didn't have a good season and retired from pro football to become an assistant coach at Texas A&M under Gene Stallings, with whom he had played in college. He remained in Texas all through 1965.

But a shift in the Rams' top echelon brought George Allen from Chicago as the head coach, and his first order of business with a team that hadn't had a winning season in seven years was to re-establish the linebacking corps. Dan Reeves, the president of the Rams, contacted Pardee in Texas.

"He talked me into coming back," admits Jack. "I wasn't very hard to convince. I felt good; I was just 28 years old when I quit. And I never had any football injuries."

Pardee's comeback coincided with a resurgence of the Rams as a winning unit. They won their division title last fall and are generally regarded as the NFL favorites to reach the Super Bowl next January.

During the 1967 campaign, Jack intercepted six passes, more than any other linebacker in pro football, to play a vital role on a Ram defensive unit which featured three all-pro performers—end Deacon Jones, tackle Merlin Olsen, and Maxie Baughan, the other corner linebacker.

"I thought Jack Pardee was an all-pro," Allen proclaims firmly. "He now appreciates what it is to play pro football." He sure does.

He sure does.

Double Cruelty

The federal income tax increase, which is in effect, and reduced federal spending, which isn't, and probably won't be, would keep Americans from paying the cruelest tax of all, inflation. That was the central argument which caused Congress to enact the tax surcharge this year.

The early returns are in. Inflation is growing instead of diminishing. The cost of living is taking the biggest jump in more than a decade. Americans who were supposed to be spending less because of the tax increase, are spending more. They are rushing to buy expensive items before prices rise further. As of the moment there is no sign of an immediate cooling of the economy, which the government said was badly overheated and needed the chill of a tax hike.

Government economists promise things will get better next month. At least they hope so. But one of them was quoted recently as saying that if inflation doesn't cool off, a lot of economic planners were thinking about heading for the hills. Apparently the planners still haven't learned to plan on human nature and human impulse, which can and does set awry the best laid plans of bureaucracy.

There still may be one way out of the problem. That is for the administration to put into effect the spending cuts ordered by Congress. So far the tax half of the anti-inflation formula has not done the job. Meanwhile the poor citizen suffers both the federal tax increase and the tax of inflation. If the latter be the cruelest of all, the combination is cruelty compounded. — Greenville (S.C.) News

Will Ask for Election of Delegates

TEXARKANA, Ark. (AP) — Richard S. Arnold, a Texarkana attorney, says the state Democratic Convention next week will be asked to consider a resolution calling for popular election of delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

Arnold, a delegate to the recent Democratic National Convention, said the resolution asks the convention to ask the 1969 General Assembly to alter the law.

The resolution, according to Arnold, stresses three major points.

— The chairman of the state convention would have the power to appoint a committee to draft a bill, making the changes, and to work for its passage.

— The General Assembly would be asked to eliminate any reference in Arkansas law to the unit rule.

— The General Assembly would be asked by the convention to pass legislation to require the delegates to the Democratic National Convention be elected by members of the party at large in a primary with an equal number of delegates coming from each congressional district.

Arnold said Democratic gubernatorial nominee Marion H. Crank had been asked to endorse the resolution.

"A number of our delegates to the Democratic National Convention formed the opinion while in Chicago that our party would receive greater public respect if our delegates were elected by the people instead of by the state committee," Arnold said in a letter.

Arnold said he had worked with Fayetteville Mayor Don Trumbo on the project.

Just Think, Artificial Arms Move

BOSTON (AP) — Battery-powered artificial arms that move just by thinking about where you want them to go have been developed by a team of doctors and engineers.

The arms were demonstrated Thursday by two men who lost their limbs in industrial accidents. The movement of the arms is controlled by muscle-generated electrical impulses and they flex like a natural arm.

Rudolph Paquin, 59, of Tiverton, R.I., said the so-called Boston arm enables him to do many more things than he can with his regular artificial arm and "without so much effort." Parker Rand Jr., 20, of Bangor, Maine, agreed the Boston arm works better.

The artificial arms are powered by small electric motors in the elbows, which get their "instructions" from minute electrical signals given off by muscles in the upper arm.

The signals are received from electrodes attached to the skin to detect electricity generated by muscles when a person wants to move his forearm.

The artificial arm weighs 2 pounds 1 ounce. The battery pack, about the size of a portable radio and carried on the waist on a shoulder strap, weighs about 3 pounds.

An amputee can lift about 10 pounds and hold about 50 pounds with the arm.

Mann estimated that with mass production the cost per arm could be less than $1,000.

It was developed by a team drawn from the staffs of M.I.T., Harvard Medical School, Massachusetts General Hospital and Liberty Mutual Insurance Co.

"The Boston arm requires no deliberate training of other muscles—it uses the same ones a man normally would," Mann said.

Dr. Melvin J. Glimmer said those participating in the first patient tests of the new arms have learned to use them in brief training sessions in contrast to "the weeks, months or never" that other artificial arms required.

RENO, Nev. (AP) — John Glenn Little may think twice before he tries to hit high "C" on the trumpet again.

Little, 28, of Sparks, Nev., reached for the note while playing with the Reno Municipal Band. His neck began hurting immediately. Examination showed two discs out of place and he was in traction today in a Reno hospital.

Rags to Riches for Poor Girl in Hawaii

HONOLULU (AP) — On Saturday Shirley Au, 18, will move from her parents' modest home to what millionaire Wendell Phillips, her 46-year-old fiancé, calls "the most beautiful apartment in the world."

She and Phillips, an "old family friend" according to Miss Au, are to be wed. He lives on the slopes of Diamond Head, not far from the Au family's three-bedroom frame house in Honolulu's Punchbowl area.

Phillips' apartment is furnished entirely in Arabian motif — the result perhaps of numerous gifts received from sultans, kings and other rulers during his archeological explorations.

There are Turkish tapestries, Egyptian camel saddles, moth-eaten-pearl inlaid tables from Lebanon and a 19th century Harrold screen, Irene Castadena, Phillips' personal secretary, describes it as "more in the line of a bachelor's quarters."

Miss Au, the fourth of five children and daughter of a nuclear submarine repair supervisor at the Pearl Harbor naval shipyard, is a second-generation Hawaiian whose grandparents emigrated from China.

The pretty, black-haired girl is a student of drama, speech, music, dancing and Arabian affairs.

Phillips is a native of Oakland, Calif., who moved to Hawaii eight years ago. His present worth, said to be more than $120 million, contrasts nicely with the days when he sold newspapers to put himself through school.

He received his degrees in paleontology, the study of fossils,

Birth Control Issue Nears Showdown

By WILLARD H. MOBLEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The conflict between Washington's Roman Catholic officialdom and a group of priests over the right of church members to use artificial birth controls appears headed for a showdown with a settlement deadline only one day away.

On its face, the dispute involves only Patrick Cardinal O'Boyle and 51 priests within the Washington diocese who disagree publicly with Pope Paul VI's edict against the use of mechanical contraceptives.

Here is the setting: — The 51 priests and some theologians adopted a statement holding that Catholic couples may responsibly decide according to their consciences that artificial contraception is permissible in some circumstances.

— The cardinal directed them to give up that stand and accept the Pope's ruling fully. He gave them until Saturday to recant and mentioned the possibility of canonical penalties for those who do not.

— As if to emphasize his point the cardinal dismissed the Rev. T. Joseph O'Donoghue as assistant pastor of a Washington church for delivering a sermon Aug. 4 quoting high church officials who disagree with the encyclical.

In another action the trustees of Catholic University asked last week that a panel be appointed to investigate whether 18 teachers have violated their responsibility to the university by publicly dissenting on the issue.

Neither side has budged and nothing was settled in a two-hour closed-door session Tuesday to which Cardinal O'Boyle summoned the 51 priests by telegram. Some 40 of them showed up.

A spokesman for the dissenters reported there was only "discussion" and the priests were "not able to judge what he (O'Boyle) might do."

Later the Rev. Mr. O'Donoghue, addressing a meeting of supporters, said it was up to them to band together to protect their viewpoint. He suggested that "even Cardinal O'Boyle can be reached by a petition."

One of his former parishioners said he had collected 353 signatures during masses protesting "unjust punishment" of O'Donoghue.

The cardinal followed up on Wednesday with release of a sternly worded statement saying he condemns as "erroneous, scandalous and offensive to faithful Catholics" the voices of dissent from the Pope's ruling.

River Varies Quiet a Bit

RENO, Nev. (AP) — The Truckee River varies in width from 150 to 300 feet as it cuts through downtown Reno. Why not cover it with concrete and use the space to park automobiles? Hotelman Charles Mapes made the suggestion at a public hearing on ways to solve parking problems around the big casinos and hotels. A planning firm is considering this and other proposals.

158 Enemy Troops Killed by Allies

SAIGON (AP) — A U.S.-South Vietnamese task force supported by tanks and Navy warships invaded the southern half of the demilitarized zone and killed 158 North Vietnamese soldiers, a military spokesman announced today.

The thrust into the eastern flank of the demilitarized zone, described by the allied spokesman as a spoiling raid, began at dawn Friday. It was the fourth allied assault into the southern half of the zone since they first invaded it in May 1967.

After 12 hours of fighting, the allied troops reported counting 158 enemy soldiers killed under a rain of fire from tank cannons, artillery and Navy warships offshore.

The attack three miles northwest of the allied outpost of Gio Linh included government infantry and armored troops, men of the U.S. Army's 5th Mechanized Infantry Division and tanks from the U.S. 3rd Marine Division.

The North Vietnamese were entrenched in heavily fortified bunkers just south of the Ben Hai River, which separates the North Vietnamese and South Vietnamese halves of the six-mile wide buffer zone.

Allied casualties were reported as four killed and 46 wounded. All of the dead and about half of the wounded were South Vietnamese troops.

Local Band to March in Fair Parade

The Hope High School Band, directed by Wesley Brandstine, will march in the grand parade that signals the opening of the annual Four States Fair at Texarkana.

The parade will be televised over KTAJ-TV. The local band will be the 16th spot in the parade. The band has also scheduled a meeting for Tuesday, Sept. 17 at 7:30 p.m. in the band building.

Education Classes for Adults Here

Hope School District has been approved for Adult Education classes for the school year, 1968-69. Classes will be offered in Adult Basic Education, grade level 1-8 and Adult General Education, grade level 9-12, beginning October 7, 1968. These classes are open to any person, regardless of race, eighteen years or older provided they have not completed the 12th grade.

There will be no fee charged to attend these classes. However, those in grades 9 through 12 will be required to furnish their own books. Books for those in grades 1-8 will be furnished free by the federal government.

Classes may be held in the evening from 6:30 to 9:30, depending on the convenience of those attending. Classes may be conducted at Red River Vocational-Technical School, Yerger High School, Fulton or at any other school in the district that will be convenient for a majority of the participants. Classes will be held two evenings per week for three hours each evening.

High school courses offered will be English, science, mathematics, and government. Elementary and primary participants will take the regular subjects on the elementary level.

Last year there were 21 adults to complete the high school course, pass the test and receive the high school equivalency diploma. On the elementary level, approximately eight completed requirements for completion of eighth grade.

Interested persons will please call Yerger High School, PR7-2691 or come by the Yerger Office on or before October 7, 1968. We urge that you register before October 7. We must have at least ten adults to enroll in order to start a class.

Even Preachers Have to Prove Statements About Big Hope Melons

By MARY ANITA LASETER
Star Feature Writer

Even a preacher has the truth of his words questioned when he tells about the huge watermelons of Hope, Ark. To the uninformed stranger, the words, "a 100-pound watermelon," could be heard with doubtful ears. That is exactly what happened last year in Tucson, Ariz.

It was in the First Presbyterian Church of Tucson that the minister, the Rev. McGee, who is originally from Southwest Arkansas, illustrated a point in his message with a reference to "a 100 pound watermelon." Someone in the congregation may have missed the point but couldn't forget the illustration. Couldn't forget and didn't believe it either.

Later, when the minister was questioned about the validity of his statement, he decided to get one of the large Hope melons the next time he was in our area during the melon season. The time was ripe last month and so was a 113-pound watermelon grown by Pat Rateliff of Patmos.

The large beauty was displayed several days in the Hope Chamber of Commerce office as part of the promotion of a contest to grow the largest melon of the year. The McGees took one look at it, purchased it and took it home.

Czech Nat'l Assembly in Session

By GENE KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

PRAGUE (AP) — Czechoslovakia's National Assembly was called into session today to approve a censorship law incorporating instructions issued to newspapers and broadcast stations two weeks ago when Soviet occupation forces began letting them reopen. The maximum penalty provided in the law is suspension of publication for three months.

Soviet bloc sources said the tolerance shown by Czechoslovakia's liberal Communist leaders during the spring and early summer to published and broadcast anti-Russian and anti-Communist opinion was perhaps the most important factor in Moscow's decision to invade the country on Aug. 20.

Party chief Alexander Dubcek began a series of liberal reforms after replacing conservative Antonin Novotny in January and might have proceeded without Russian interference if he had restrained the press and radio, one East European source said.

"Dubcek said he loved the Russians, but he proved that he did not really know them," the informant said.

Dubcek himself was a victim of censorship Thursday night, presumably self-imposed at the urging of his associates and advisers. He had prepared a television speech in which he said he and his colleagues did not want to bring back censorship, that it was a step backward and would be only temporary.

But when the speech was telecast three hours later than scheduled, these remarks had been deleted. One report said Gustav Husak, chief of the Slovak Communist party, persuaded Dubcek to water down his speech.

Other deletions included statements that there were anti-Communist forces in other Communist countries as well as in Czechoslovakia, and that liberalization will continue even if at a slower pace than before the occupation.

One source said that if the original text had been broadcast, "the Russians would have been back in Prague within five minutes."

Canada to Admit Czech Refugees

OTTAWA (AP) — The Cabinet has authorized special steps to permit speedy entry of Czechoslovak refugees into Canada. Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau announced Wednesday.

He told a news conference, "The government has accepted a provision to facilitate their passage to Canada."

Trudeau said he expected 1,000 or so Czechoslovak citizens might want to make a new home in Canada because of the Warsaw Pact occupation.

chased it, and took it back to Tucson. We hope it caused a few Arizona fades to turn as red as the watermelon meat.

The watermelon growing contest began this year on May 15 and will conclude tomorrow, September 15. The first prize of $300 will be awarded to the grower of the largest watermelon in the area. A prize of $150 will go to the second place winner in Hempstead County, and $150 to the second place winner in the area. Only one prize will be allowed each person.

A veil of secrecy has been over the watermelon patches around Hope the last few weeks, and it's not known if the Preacher's Proof watermelon will be the largest of the year or not. Aubrey Goodwin, Route 3, Rosston, and Norman Taylor, Rocky Mount, were in contention for top honors not long ago, and Lester Kent, Route 1, Hope, Charles Salisbury, Route 3, Hope, and Arnold Middlebrooks, Route 4, Hope, had some big ones on the vines, also.

Originally in the contest were several who dropped out as the time drew short. They were H. P. Spencer, Rosston; Roy Roberts, Route 3, Hope; Ed Hubbard, Patmos; Mrs. D. L. Rogers, Route 4, Hope; L. L. Morton, Route 3, Hope; and John C. Lloyd, Route 3, Hope.

What is the secret of Hope's giant watermelons? Seed, soil, and climate. Hope has the "just right" types of all three. The special seeds from Hope watermelons may be planted elsewhere, but they won't grow as large as they do in Hope.

That is why Hope, Ark., is the Watermelon Capital of the World.

Thomasson Responds to Charges

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Jerry Thomasson, the Republican candidate for attorney general, responded Thursday to charges that he had violated state law by using the Arkansas flag on a campaign poster.

State Rep. Charles Matthews of North Little Rock made the charges Thursday and defended Atty. Gen. Joe Purcell's booklet of election laws.

Odell Pollard, chairman of the state GOP, had charged Wednesday that Purcell was using the booklet as a "campaign device prepared at state expense."

Thomasson did not deny that he was using the state flag on a campaign poster.

"The statute he (Matthews) referred to does prohibit use of the flag for trade advertising," Thomasson said, in a prepared statement "but this same law specifically allows its use for patriotic causes."

Thomasson said he had made the same point in 1966. He said he used the Arkansas flag in his campaign because it "represents the basic principles of my campaign."

He dismissed Matthews' charges as a "thin smokescreen against the printing and mailing of 55,000 copies of campaign material at taxpayer's expense."

Matthews called Pollard's remarks "a partisan argument designed to disrupt the deliberations" of the state Board of Election Commissioners.

Pollard said he objected to Purcell's picture appearing on the cover of the booklet.

Matthews called the booklet "the finest compilation of election laws ever distributed in this state."

Matthews said a section of an Arkansas law prohibits the use of the state flag "in connection with any advertisement of any kind." The law sets a penalty of conviction of a fine not exceeding $100 or imprisonment for not more than 30 days or both.

"In the face of this statute, the Republican candidate for attorney general conducts his campaign in a manner which appears to be clearly violative of our criminal law," Matthews said.

Matthews said Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller and Pollard should "publicly censure the illegal election activities of their super-ficial candidate for attorney general."

Navy to Let 30,000 Reserves Out

By BOB HORTON
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon, in an action described by one congressman as "disgraceful," has announced early discharges for 30,000 Navy reservists serving two-year active duty enlistments.

The Pentagon said the move announced Friday would result in a saving of $48 million in the current fiscal year, thus helping to meet federal spending cuts mandated by Congress.

The plan, however, does not affect thousands of Army, Air Force and National Guard personnel who were activated early this year in the wake of North Korea's seizure of the USS Pueblo.

Rep. Richard S. Schweiker, R-Pa., a member of the House Armed Services Committee, labeled the plan "an outrageous injustice" and suggested that the callup during the Pueblo crisis was "an excuse to gain extra manpower" to meet demands of the Vietnam war.

Schweiker, who has written a complaining letter to Secretary of Defense Clark M. Clifford said the January activation of nearly 15,000 Navy and Air Force reservists was an "outrageous sham" and said the men have been performing only routine chores.

The men who will benefit by the Pentagon's "early out" plan are individuals who voluntarily signed up for a Navy reserve program referred to as the "two by six" tour.

This requires two years active duty plus four years in a reserve status. The usual Navy enlistment is a flat four years active service.

Some reservists in this program will be allowed to cut their two-year active duty period by as much as one year.

Rusk Will Welcome His Replacement

By TOM TODD
Associated Press Writer

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk said Thursday night "like any GI in a foxhole, I shall welcome my own replacement with a great deal of affection."

In a rambling address before the annual dinner meeting of the Manufacturers Association of Connecticut, Rusk commented on the rigors of his office before moving on to foreign policy.

Alluding to the end of his term as the country's 54th Secretary of State, Rusk said he would soon be "out of season for the 'hunters outside.'"

He was referring to the more than 1,000 demonstrators who surrounded Yale University's Woolsey Hall where he spoke. Rusk attempted to clear up what he termed "misconceptions which surround the great issues of our period."

Charges that the United States reached an "understanding" with the Soviet Union regarding the invasion of Czechoslovakia, Rusk said, are "absurd accusations without a shred of truth."

He said there was little the U.S. could have done by force to aid the Czechs "without automatically engaging in a war with the Soviet Union."

Rusk said the U.S. has no interest in establishing spheres of influence because they are "not consistent with maintaining the Vietnam war, Rusk said the important consideration is not just peace in Southeast Asia, but rather the 'fidelity of the United States under its security treaties.'

Switching to the war in Nigeria, the secretary of state said the great number of civilian deaths is a result of Nigerian leaders not giving "high enough priority to their own people and their needs."

Rusk called on the leaders of Nigeria "to give us a chance" to make medical and other necessary aid available to the civilian population.

Many of the demonstrators carried signs urging support of secessionist Biafra, in addition to the usual antiwar signs.
